Sean Ransom

2 Cor. 7:8-11

Godly confrontation and sorrow results in:

1. Genuine Repentance – 2Cor. 7:8-9
2. Salvation – 2Cor. 7:10, and
3. A Desperation to Make Things Right – 2Cor. 7:11

Discussion Questions

1. What does godly sorrow look like?
2. What are words that we might use or behaviors we might show that reveal that we do not have godly sorrow?
3. What are some practical ways that we can show godly sorrow?
4. When a person who has been confronted by sin responds by saying, "I'm sorry you feel that way", what does this demonstrate and why is it wrong?
5. What might it indicate if you don't have godly sorrow over your sins?
6. Do you need to ask someone to forgive you for something right now? If so, what is stopping you?
7. Make up some scenarios where someone committed a sin against someone else. In those scenarios, what are some practical actions that the forgiven offender can do to show their earnestness to act quickly to make things right and to show their eagerness to undo the damage that was done?
8. How long should the repentant and forgiven party work to build back trust?
9. What are some ways someone can show enthusiasm to repent, reconcile and repair a relationship?
10. What should you do if an issue is confronted, but you don't agree that it is a sin, or something that you need to turn from?
